Abstract

This thesis examines the history of U.S. foreign policy in the Middle East from the start of the Cold War immediately following the conclusion of World War II to the present day (2014). U.S. policy has been subject to many reevaluations and adjustments, while simultaneously, upheld national security measures. As the world moves toward a future where globalization is most prevalent, the United States will have to make decisions regarding its foreign policy in the Middle East. Its alliances, interests, Islamic fundamentalism, an evolving Muslim society, and a global security agenda has forced the United States to reevaluate its policy throughout the world.
