The Global Text Project

Richard T. Watson, University of GeorgiaDonald J. McCubbrey, University of Denver

Abstract

The Global Text Project is intended to create global free textbooks for developing countries. We argue that two key technological and an opportunity to create a new model for textbook publishing cost channel for distributing information products in digital form. Communities have created the platform for collaborative creation of this model a free and open content library will be developed for major subjects for an undergraduate education. This project is part of the global efforts to address the educational resource constraints in environments in the world.
