Abstract

From the moment Reinhold Niebuhr heard of the events at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, he immediately began imagining American involvement in the war to follow Allied victory over the Axis powers. Arguably the most influential theologian in the twentieth century, Niebuhr developed an internationalist perspective on the international system in the 1940s. Niebuhr believed it was America's duty to lead the world in the development of a new international system.
