Tourism planning: an integrated and sustainable development approach.

Author(s) : Inskeep, E.

Book : Tourism planning: an integrated and sustainable development approach. pp.508pp. ref.97

Abstract : The book is designed to fill a need in providing planning approach guidelines for the integrated and sustainable development of tourism that is responsive to community desires and needs. It examines tourism planning at all levels from micro and includes approaches that are applicable to both the more and less developed countries with case studies from many parts of the world. Divided into five parts covers the general background of and approaches to tourism planning, while the remainder of the book examines specific aspects of this subject. Part two is process, principles and techniques of preparing national and regional tourism plans. Part three looks at the community or more detailed levels of planning resorts, urban forms of tourism, and tourist attractions and the application of development standards. Environmental and socio-economic concerns are discussed in part four. Part five reviews those institutional elements that are important in developing and implementing the various approaches to plan implementation.
