The Ethico-Aesthetics of Affect and a Sensational Pedagogy

Stephanie Springgay

Abstract

This essay's main purpose is to sketch the relations between affect, politics, and everyday life in order to think sensational pedagogy. Thinking affectively about politics differs from approaches that are a direct analysis of signs and discourses, m rationales. As opposed to an understanding of affect as something to be captured, controlled, rationalized, and suppressed, I attempt to reclaim the affective in order to consider the body's intensities and compositions in knowledge production. Using performance/interventionist artwork "The Lactation Station Breastmilk Bar" as a site from which to think about an affective pedagogy, thus an aesthetic approach to politics, I emphasize the importance of sensation in knowledge production.
