Book : 'The visitation of god?' The potato and the great Irish famine. 1993 pp.x + 288. ref.many

Abstract : In this book the expertise of an agricultural meteorologist is brought to bear on the great Irish potato famine. Opening with an autobiographical essay, followed by a moving account of the ever-increasing dependence of the poor on the potato in famine Ireland, the author discusses the reliability of agricultural statistics and the scientific controversy that broke out in Europe and Ireland about the nature of potato blight in 1845. The role of the treasury official Charles Trevelyan is re-popular myths about the famine are reassessed. The bibliography includes record of contemporary writings on the potato economy and its collapse.
