Abstract or Description:

My name has always been at odds with my gender. I have always said "Hello, can I speak to Freddie Robins please?"
 "Yes you're speaking to her."
 "Oh (pause) I thought you were going to be a man."

My name is gendered as male, in stark contrast to my creative practice. When I go to work for the first time the conversation often goes something like:
 "What do you do?"
 "I'm an artist"
 "What do you do? Paint?"
 "No, I knit"
 "Oh (silence)"

Knitting has long held associations with women, practicality, and domesticity, justifying sitting down and watching TV, or more recently a 'n Bitch clubs and Yarn Bombing. I do none of these things. I have designated time to knit, knitting inherently useless things. Knitting is a form of knitted comfort or rather discomfort blanket. My knitting practice is a form of knitted comfort or rather discomfort blanket. My knitting practice is a form of knitted comfort or rather discomfort blanket. My knitting practice is a form of knitted comfort or rather discomfort blanket.

The paper was presented at (Dis)identifications: Gender Matters conference was organized by CREATE/feminisms, a research project that is an element of the partnership between the School of Art and Design and the School of Architecture.
