

Session timeout

Your previous session has ended.

OK

e Arts.

Download Here

BROWSE

searching Humanities & Social Sciences Collection CHANGE DATABASES

BACK TO TABLE OF CONTENTS

An error has occurred

 Full content available

Beatrice Wood Center for the Arts

Ceramics Technical
Issue 38 (Jun 2014)

Tannenbaum, Judith

Abstract: Anyone at all familiar with Beatrice Wood (1893-1998) knows that she was an extraordinary individual. Wood - or Beato, as she came to be known - left an outsized artistic legacy when she died at 105. Her creative work encompassed acting, painting, drawing and ceramics, which she pursued in the 1930s at the age of forty to support herself; in her later years, she turned to writing. Her larger-than-life personality attracted such Dada artists as Marcel Duchamp and Henri-Pierre Roche. The three of them are said to be the inspiration for the romantic triangle at the heart of Francois Truffaut's 1962 film Jules and Jim (based on Roch's autobiographical novel).¹ Her influence represents more than her various and acclaimed skills; after death, she continues to survive as an artistic force in the eponymous California centre that attracts artists and enthusiasts.

FULL TEXT PDF (711KB)

To cite this article: Tannenbaum, Judith. Beatrice Wood Center for the Arts [online]. Ceramics Technical, No. 38, Jun 2014: 3-9. Availability:

<https://search.informit.com.au/documentSummary;dn=434977897657286;res=IELHS>
ISSN: 1324-4175. [cited 23 Jul 18].

Personal Author: Tannenbaum, Judith;

Source: Ceramics Technical, No. 38, Jun 2014: 3-9

Document Type: Journal Article

ISSN: 1324-4175

Subject: Women artists; Theosophists; Art--Exhibitions;

Database: HUMANITIES & SOCIAL SCIENCES COLLECTION

 View desktop version
Informit v4.0 Copyright © 2015