Abstract:

Howard Van Till's paper on Intelligent Design (ID), published in this journal, (2003) 15(2), presented readers with a scientific demolition of William Dembski's arguments for ID. Here we argue that Van Till's presentation was presenting a distorted picture of ID, and misrepresenting the contributions to ID of William Dembski and Michael Behe. We provide the background to Van Till's paper and provide a more accurate account of what ID is about.
