Abstract:

The African American church has played a significant role in the struggle and liberation of African American people. This article focuses on a community activist who enlists the support of an African American church to confront the local school board's record on educating African American children. The first section of the paper defines the values and goals of the Black social action: Community psychology, John Lee Johnson the community activist, and the Church. The second section describes the problem and the third describes actions taken by the church and interventionists. The data comes from the participation on the School Board during the time that the action was initiated. In addition an extended interview with Mr. Johnson was conducted. The role of the Church in his development is highlighted.
