Author(s) : Estrin, D. ; Swaigen, J.

Miscellaneous : Environment on trial: a handbook of Ontario environmental law.

Abstract : Recently there has been increasing public pressure on government to reduce air pollution and protect wilderness. The result has been a spate of legislation which has produced a much higher degree of government control over the environment. This process is based on the principle that public support of environmental mechanisms is essential to their implementation. It also suggests that citizens must participate in the decision-making process.
