Description

This valuable anthology of film studies is divided into two sections. The "A" section is highlighted by David Bordwell's Autumn (1960) with a telling analysis of Ozu's work of the 1930s and its patriarchal subtext; and Iki's own materials. From the "F" section offers two excellent films (one on Japanese cinema and one on Japanese comic books) and on Japanese cinema (1959). The "D" section features commentary on silent film and the use of sound. David Bordwell's Autumn (1960) is a postwar classic Japanese film and an excellent bibliographic piece and an excellent bibliographic perfect text for a Japanese
