South African Solidarity with Palestine Motivations, Strategies, and Impact

Rajini Srikanth, University of Massachusetts Boston

Abstract

South African support for Palestine received a compelling articulation from President Nelson Mandela. This article examines a more recent articulation of South African support for Palestinian self-determination. It discusses anti-apartheid resistance as well as current economic and political developments in Africa that have led to the emergence of a robust popular movement for rights since 2005. Both South African civil society organizations and the government have responded to the 2005 call by Palestinian civil society for divestment, and sanctions (BDS) campaign against the state of Israel. This article discusses the different motivations of these two groups for participation in the movement, presents the scope of BDS within South Africa, and discusses its economic, and political impact for South Africans and Palestinians in the long term. Finally, it addresses the question of why South Africans are central participants in the Palestinian struggle.
