Night Story

Island

Issue 99 (Summer 2004)

Robertson, Rachel

Abstract: She asks questions. I sit on her bed, in the half-light, my hand resting on her arm. I have read her a chapter from the book and turned out the lamp. And now she slips down under the covers and asks her questions. 'Tell me,' she says, 'tell me a story about Joseph.' Her dark hair lies on the pale pillow like seaweed at the beach. Her pyjamas are yellow, with white piping around the collar and cuffs. She smells of strawberry bubble bath. 'Tell me,' says Becky.
