Abstract

The purpose of this panel is to examine some of the underlying reasons why fantasy literature is written and why it is worth writing. Many of us, professional or amateur, have been tempted to try our own hand at writing fantasy. The panelists here today will hopefully be able to give us some story ideas we feel we must try to get down on paper. Our honored panelists include Paul Zimmer Bradley, author of the Darkover series and the Mists of Magic; Marion Z. Bradley, author of Lady of Light and Lady of Darkness; Stephen Donaldson, author of "Chronicles of Thomas Covenant"; and Evangaline Walton, author of Rhiannon, The Children of Llyr, The Island of the Mighty, Princess Branwen, completing a new series of books based on the Greek Myths.
